Premiere Performance Of 'Twelfth Night' This Evening

One Public Presentation; Three for Students

This evening will see the climax of many weeks effort by the cast of the English Department's production of Twelfth Night by William Shakespeare. The curtain will go up at 7.30 for the initial performance which is being presented for students only.

Tickets which are still on sale are offered at reduced prices for student consumption. They can be obtained for 50 cents, half the $1 price non-students are required to pay. Prices include tax.

There will be three special student performances starting with tonight. The second will be held Monday, Mar. 3, and the third on Tuesday, Mar. 4. A fourth will be presented on Wednesday, Mar. 5, which will be open to the general public. On this occasion, curtain time will be at 8.30 p.m. All presentations will be held in Moyses Hall.

The company's production of last winter, Gordon Bottomley's "Gruch" was performed on only one evening. This year's change to four performances, only one of which is open to everyone, is due in part to the large numbers of high school students expected to attend, as Twelfth Night is part of their curriculum for this year.

For the first time, technical direction in a McGill play has been placed completely in the charge of a student. Silvia Singer, a fourth year fine arts student, will control all set, light and costume design. Miss Singer, who has also done designing for past red and white revue productions, is doing this work toward a thesis.

Slacks Considered Improper for Girls At Queen's Univ.

Kingsion — (CUP) — Student Council at Queen's University held a meeting on the university's unwritten policy of forbidding coeds the wearing of slacks. The Dean pointed out to the Students' vice-president that there is no official rule regarding this, but the wearing of slacks to lectures is generally frowned upon by the professors as being unladylike. Since most visitors to the university, the dean continued, visit the library, it is especially there that the girls should not give a bad impression.

It was finally decided to relax the rule during exam time since girls like to wear slacks while studying and find it inconvenient to change to look up a reference in the library.

Here at McGill, coeds wear slacks throughout the campus on cold winter days, although ruling prevents slacks to be worn in the R.V.C. cafeteria.

Organization Changes at Women's Union Meeting

A motion proposing changes in the organization of the Women's Union, reports of the year's activities, and speeches by the candidates contesting Women's Union offices will be the main topics at the annual open meeting of the Women's Union, which will be held Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Women's Union Lounge in R.V.C.

The motion, presented by Mary

Reps of CUS Acclaimed

Two of next year's executive of the Commerce Undergraduate Society have been acclaimed. The rest of the executive is slated to be contested on March 5th. Those acclaimed were: Secretary, Peter Silverman, and Athletics Representative, Don Shapray.

In the March 5th elections, the following posts are to be contested: Bruce Logan and Ray Dho are vying for the presidency, and Bob Moffit and Barry Promislow for the Vice-Presidency. There is going to be a three-way fight for the post of Treasurer, the three candidates being Joel Rublnovich, Isadore Sozansky and Lorne Cox.

Modern Poetry Talk Given By Dylan Thomas

By SELMA SKOLL

In an hour's reading of Modern poetry as well as some of his own, Dylan Thomas, a contemporary Welsh poet at present on a lecture tour in United States, last night spoke to a group of students and faculty members in the Physical Science Centre Auditorium. He was brought to McGill by SCOPE, the Cultural Committee of the S.E.C.

"I am here tonight to read some of my own poetry and that of other Modern poets with comment whenever it may or may not be necessary. As for my own work, I will let the lyrical riddles stand on their own feet," Dylan Thomas stated.

He opened his reading with a short commentary on his youth referring to his early poetry as "explosive outbursts of a boyish boy in love with the shape and sound of words."

As a young man, the speaker said, he read indiscriminately, whatever he cared to read. He then began to imitate the works of writers that he enjoyed, attempting anything. He said that "if Milton hadn't written Paradise Lost, I would even had had a shot at it."

He commented that his work was always experimental, using the past for inspiration. Thomas said that he could not remember what impulse drove him to write his earliest poems calling them "hurly-burly, lamenting and even lamentable."

"The only thing that matters of poetry is the enjoyment of it and the eternal movement behind it. It is the function of the poet to express joy and tragedy and the celebration of man and God, which may be the same celebration," Thomas said.

His verse reading consisted of several poems by W. B. Yeats; a poem of Henry Reed, read with a Welsh poet at present on a lecture tour in United States, last night spoke to a group of students and faculty members in the Physical Science Centre Auditorium. He was brought to McGill by SCOPE, the Cultural Committee of the S.E.C.

From his newest book "In Country Sleep," Dylan Thomas then read "Lament" and "Do Not Go Gentle Into Good Night." From earlier collections of his own poetry he read "Fern Hill," "Hunchback in the Park," and "Poem in October."

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Dudek of the English Department who called Dylan Thomas the "dominant voice in English poetry today." Mr. Dudek said that Thomas's poetry is "a revolt of passion and vision against established order."

Mr. Thomas will continue his lecture tour today visiting first New York and then going to the Mid-Western States and on to California. His latest book "In Country Sleep" has just come out.

Mr. Thomas was the fourth speaker in a series of addresses sponsored by SCOPE.

Tuesday Rally Set For One in Union

Candidates Will Outline Proposed Platforms

With S.E.C. elections only one week away, students are being given their last chance of meeting the candidates, three of whom will occupy the highest student administrative posts on the campus in the coming year.

The rally is to be held on Tuesday, March 5, at 1 p.m. in the Union Ballroom. The candidates will be allotted five minutes each, in which to outline their platforms, and proposed changes.

The principal speakers will include Peter Cameron, Bill Magyar, and Mel Rothman, nominees for the presidency of the Students Executive Society, the post now held by Jacques Tetrault.

Another important post to be contested is that of President of the Men's Union. The present president, Danny Kingslone, is running for re-election and will be opposed by Jim Robb.

Also to be contested is the post of President of the Women's Union. The candidates, who will address the assembly on Tuesday afternoon are Ann Skaith and Ruth Taylor.

Recruiting for Officer Training To End March

Major McKee, Resident Staff Officer of the McGill contingent of the C.O.T.C., announced today that all recruiting for prospective officer cadets will cease by the end of March.

The C.O.T.C. offers two and three year programmes whereby students proceeding toward degrees may qualify for active or reserve commissions in many branches of the Canadian Army. Training is carried out each Monday evening during the academic year in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium-Armoury, and for 16 to 20 weeks during the summers at Active Army schools. Cadets have the status of junior officers during their training, and pay and working conditions are attractive.

Students, wishing further information about this plan, with a view to enrolling in the C.O.T.C. this year, are advised to see the Resident Staff Officer at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium-Armoury without delay.

Four members of the Debating Union Executive were elected at a meeting held yesterday at 1 p.m. in the Union Ballroom. They were Jack Shayne, Men's Vice President, David L'Esperance, Corresponding Secretary, Peter Slater, Recording Secretary, and Jerome Smyth, Treasurer.

Previous to this, Eric de Bellaigue won the Presidency and Pat Vos the Women's Vice Presidency by acclamation.

Voting figures for Vice President were: Jack Shayne, 89, Avrum Cohen, 65; for Corresponding Secretary, David L'Esperance, 92, Isadore Aablon, 63; for Recording Secretary, Peter Slater, 109, Allison Knox, 48 and Men's polling booths will be situated in the Union, and Men's Common Room of the Arts Building. Women will vote in the Union and in the Women's Common Room of the Arts Building.

It is hoped that a large percentage of the student body will turn out.

McGill Choral Society to Hold 'Springsong'

The Polovetsian Dance-Choruses by Borodin will be one of the major works to be sung by members of the McGill Choral Society when they present their second annual concert, "Springsong," on Saturday, March 22nd in the Currie Gym.

Alexander Borodin, a member of the nineteenth century Russian School of Five, which includes Rimsky-Korsakoff and Moussorgsky, was not a prolific composer. His one operatic composition, "Prince Igor," was left unfinished at his death. The task of completing it was undertaken by Rimsky-Korsakoff and Glazounoff, the result being one of the finest examples of Russian dramatic music. From this opera, a suite of dance-choruses has been arranged with fine effect, portraying admirably the blend of oriental sensuousness and vitality which is found throughout the opera.

The Dance-Choruses were performed by the society two years ago, and due to the acclaim with which they were received at that time, they are repeated again this season.

Question Panel Set For Newman Meeting

A Question Panel will be featured at the Newman Club General Meeting this Sunday, March 2nd, at the Sacred Heart Convent. The meeting will be preceded by Mass at 10 a.m.

The Panel will be composed of: Mr. Murray Ballantyne, Mr. Herby Quinn, Rev. Kevin Scott, S.J., and Mrs. Francis, Professor of English at Sir George William College. Frank Wickham will be master of ceremonies.

Redmen Face Blues In Forum Puck Tilt

Redmen Band Elections Held

On Thursday last week the McGill Redmen Band held their annual elections. The following are the executive for the next year, as announced by Derek Speirs, the Personnel Director: Bill Van Alsteyn was elected president and the vice-presidency went to Len MacDougall. Others on the executive are David Gould, quartermaster, and Terry Crowe, librarian, John Sheppard and Derek Speirs.

The band will play for the last time tonight at the Forum when McGill meets Toronto in their final home game hockey bout. As this will mark the band's last performance this year, it is hoped that a big crowd as possible will come out to support them.

Locals Make Last Home Stand Tonight at 8:30

By BOB BORNSTEIN

Bill Wade, Varsity coach, hits town with his Blueboys today for a Forum Festival with the Redmen tonight.

Wade must be biting his nails, elbows, toenails and anything else he can lay his teeth on these days.

His Blues have a chance to retain the hockey title they won last season, but the job is going to be a tough one. The Varsity find themselves in the position of having to sweep their remaining three games to cop the championship.

Bluemontor Bill has spent some sleepless nights tossing and turning. He probably sees all kinds of little Redmen crawling all over him.

McGill has two contests left with the Blues, and all the Redmen have to do is knock off the Blues once. One loss will smash the Toronto hopes to oblivion.

If the Varsity valiants are able to hurdle McGill tonight at the Forum, Saturday evening the Blueboys are slated to go against Les Carabins at Verdun. A win there and the Torontonians are practically champs.

Rocky Robillard and his Redmen, going nowhere in particular, would like nothing better than to topple the Queen City crew and blast them right out of the race.

Rock's men will be out to make a good showing in their final home appearance of the season. McElellan will guard the cage as usual, with Appleby, Robertson, Shaw and McGowan on defence. Robertson and McGowan will also be used on the forward line, taking spins at center where the Redmen are weak.

Schutz, McElheron, Teasdale and Gene Robillard are McGill's best scoring weapons. They'll be out there firing the puck, along with Irvin, Lynch, Dorion, Lupovich, and Duke.

The vaunted Toronto attack features Don Rope, Jack Wheldrake, Ernie Frey, Phil Arrowsmith, Norm Fox, Pete Vernon, Red Stephen, Al Conboy and John Adams.

Jack MacKenzie, Paul Prendergast, Al Fasan and Joe Kane are the rearguards. Jack Ross is the keeper of the twines.

Toronto has been an unpredictable club all season. In their previous appearance on Forum ice, the Blues were extremely impressive, walloping the Redmen 5-1. At Varsity Arena, McGill held the Blues to a 3-3 tie.

After tonight's clash, the Blues and Redmen meet once more. That game is on tap for Toronto March 7 in the final league tussle of the schedule. If the Varsity go undefeated until then, that contest will settle the championship question.

Starting time tonight is 8:30. The McGill Redmen Band is expected to be present and a large student attendance is hoped for.

Faculty Jackets to Be On Sale Today

Faculty jackets for Arts and Science will be on sale today in the Union from 9-3 p.m.

Two qualities of the dark blue jackets are being sold — lined jackets for $10.50 and unlined jackets for $7.00.

Samples will be shown on request at a booth in the main hall of the Union.

McGill - Osgoode Debate Tonight

'Greater Federal Powers' Opposed by Visitors Four Members Elected To Head Debating Union

The subject of greater powers of the Canadian Federal Government is to be debated this evening at 8.30 in the Auditorium of the Physical Science Centre by Chuck Taylor and Art Lenzoff who will be upholding the affirmative of the resolution "Resolved that the Federal Government should be strengthened at the expense of the provinces."

In the history of intercollegiate debating, every Osgoode Hall-McGill debate has been decided by a very close margin. Last year, Osgoode Hall downed McGill on the topic of German Rearmament. Because of this, keen rivalry has always existed between the two institutions.

The McGill Debating Society has invited Brigadier McCarthy, Mr. J. B. Stirling, Past President of the Board of Trade, and Mr. M. E. Moscovitch, Q.C., to act as judges for the debate, and Professor J. Malory of the Political Science Department will act as chairman.

Art Lenzoff, a first year medical student, was winner of the Bovey Shield and Papineau Cup several years ago, and was a past member of the Debating Society Executive. He was on the team which defeated West Point last year during their visit to Canada. Chuck Taylor, winner of the Rhodes Scholarship, was a finalist in the Papineau Cup last year, a former member of the Debating Executive, and represented McGill when they debated against Tufts College last year.

While a team from Osgoode Hall is visiting McGill this weekend, McGill will be sending a team to visit the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall, away. On the afternoon of the Feb. 29, McGill debaters will be at Toronto, and that evening, they will oppose Osgoode Hall in a debate comparable to the Moyses Hall Debates held at McGill.

The resolution will be the same as the one being debated here at McGill upholding the negative of the resolution at both debates. Representing McGill will be Danny Kingslone, President of the Union and a Gold A Debater, and his teammate will be Jerry Charness, Secretary of the McGill Union, a Gold A Debater, and a finalist in the Papineau Cup this year.

McGill Debaters Score Win In First Round of I.U.D.L.

McGill made a clean sweep in the first round of the Inter-University Debating League. The resolution under debate was: "Resolved that in English speaking countries, the struggle for individual liberty is being lost at home." McGill sent one team to debate at Loyola College while a Loyola team came to debate here, both McGill squads scoring victories.

Peter Satterthwaite and Irwin Gliserman, members of the affirmative team, successfully upheld the resolution at Loyola. The home team composed of Dan Morris and Leo Kolber successfully defeated the resolution upheld by the visitors.

The three judges for each of these debates were from the Canadian Institute of Speech. Each one considered a certain aspect of the debates: material, presentation and delivery. At the close of the debate they gave constructive comments to both teams.

This series was the first round of the Inter-University Debating League for this term, the second round is coming up very shortly to be followed by a third and final round leading to the national championship.

for Junior Treasurer, Jerome Smyth, 82, Ben Greenberg, 42 and Garth Mosher 32.

In all, at a meeting better attended than that of last year, 161 ballots were cast.

The Chairman, Mike Wilson, President of the Debating Union, called the meeting to order at about 1.15 p.m., and the President elect, Eric de Bellaigue, gave a brief outline of the plans he hoped to carry out next year. These included the substitution of a Maritimes debating tour to replace that held in recent years, in the Philadelphia area. He also stressed the vital importance of debating activity within the University on the Faculty and Inter-Faculty.

The four winners have had previous experience in the sphere of debating. Jack Shayne serves on the present executive as Treasurer and has previously been in charge of publicity. He is an experienced Gold A debater. David L'Esperance also served on the present Executive, and he now retains his old position for an additional year.

Peter Slater, who is from Australia, came to Canada shortly before he entered McGill last September. Since that time he has taken part in inter-collegiate debates, and represented McGill at the Burlington tournament last November. His team lost only one of its debates. Jerome Smyth is now in first year law at McGill, and recently won a debate here against a team from the University of Toronto. At Assumption College he was President of the Students Council for a year.

Hart House Warden Will Address Student Meeting

Prof. Nicholas Ignatieff, war-time head of the British War Office's intelligence section on Russia and now warden of Hart House, University of Toronto, will address a student meeting in the Union Clubroom at 1 p.m. today.

Son of a family deeply rooted in Russian history, Warden Ignatieff is rated as a foremost expert on Russian affairs. His grandfather was prime minister to Alexander II, and his father minister of education in the last cabinet of Tsar Nicholas. In 1919 the family fled from the Communist regime to England.

Warden Ignatieff has just recently been named director of the forthcoming fifth International Student Service (ISS) seminar in India, for which three scholarships have been offered McGill undergraduate students. His address to day is being sponsored by the campus ISS committee.

A trained engineer, Prof. Ignatieff went overseas in 1940 as a Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Engineers. Because of his knowledge of the Russians he was posted to the British War Office for intelligence duties to assist in plotting the probable actions of the Russian allies, who volunteered little of the information so vital to British and American strategy.

He became head of this section of intelligence and was decorated by the British and Americans. He retired with the rank of Lieut-Colonel in 1947.

While on the campus Warden Ignatieff will confer with ISS committee members on the India seminar. McGill's three scholarship winners will be selected by a joint student-faculty committee here. Application forms for the scholarships are available at the student council office in the Union. Applications close March 14.

Dents to Hold Annual Formal Dance in Gym

The Dental Ball, the annual formal dance sponsored by the students in the Faculty of Dentistry, will be held on March 7 in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gym at 10 p.m.

This dance is open to all students attending the university. The price of tickets is five dollars per couple, with dress optional.

Dancing will be from 10-3 to the music of Russ Merridith and his band.

Being a Part of McGill, Not in It

There used to be a phrase bandied about the campus a few years ago exclaiming, "Be a part of McGill, not just in it." The exhortation was used by certain student groups to try and stir interest in their particular activity or function and was aimed at that often maligned, apathetic, singularly independent type of student who spent his time attending a few lectures and doing a bit of studying but rarely put his person within the walls of the student Union, or attended any student function.

For most people the significance of the slogan, an example of our emersion in the jingle age, went no deeper nor held any greater meaning. But the phrase, as is the habit of most catchy maxims of the sort, has lingered in our memory since we first heard it, and a more significant meaning seems to us to be caught in its words.

A university is many things to many people depending upon their relation to it. McGill as a university is much more than the physical aspects listed in an annual report. It's the intangible things that make it as great as it is. It's not confined by the streets enclosing the campus, nor is it the province nor even the country that limits its scope. Essentially McGill is everything from the dressing room after the one we had to win but didn't to a serious figure, bent over a cage, intent on the queer antics of a few white mice. It is a graduate geologist counting pebbles in a jam jar in the heat of Africa or a speaker at a Graduates' Banquet rising from his seat, tinkling his glass, and giving a slight cough to test his vocal cords. And then again McGill is the worried undergraduate, fidgeting nervously before the Dean, "You see Dean, if I could just have . . ." or again, the polished business executive before the shiny desk of the Principal, "Mr. Principal, What this university needs is . . ." Or McGill is a small group of heavily clothed men behind a string of dogs leaning into the sharp arctic wind, with their instruments rattling on the sled; or perhaps it's a plane carrying a patient to the operating table of a world-famed neurosurgeon.

These are just a few of the things that are essentially part of the larger university community. But we often wonder just how much of McGill the average undergraduate, in his four years of study, comes to know intimately. Is McGill to most students made up mostly of the lecture rooms of a few buildings, each fitted with rows of seats, windows and one professor; perhaps the library and gym, and occasionally the Union; a place to listen, to read and to write, seldom to understand and less seldom to think? How much does a student taking the bus down in the morning, attending his lectures, going to the Library, and catching an afternoon bus home again, know and feel of the great world-wide institution of which he is a part? It is so easy in attending lectures and little else, to graduate from university and call yourself a McGill Man but how relatively little is denoted by such a term under those circumstances! To be merely in McGill and not a part of it is a wasted opportunity, a tragic misuse of privilege; for surely the associations, the spirit, the sense of tradition and loyalty of college life are as much a part of the education as physics and philosophy.

Now, Now Girls!

As a member of the Women's Union Executive I feel that since Miss Draper is determined to carry on with her proposal that the Women's Union be abolished and replaced by a subcommittee of the S.E.C. that there are a few points which should be clarified.

First, why is Miss Draper so very insistent upon carrying through her proposition when she alone advocates it? If there was a group discontented with the present setup I am sure that with all Miss Draper's urgings they would have made themselves heard in her support. From my associations not only with the Women's Union, the Women's Athletic Association and as a member of Royal Victoria College I have not heard one voice in support of Miss Draper. Doubtless Miss Draper will say that I am prejudiced, however, the fact remains that up until Miss Draper's article of February 28, I was only slightly amused over the whole affair, believing that such a controversy would only serve to make the student body more aware of the functions and activities of the Women's Union.

I would like to take this opportunity to inform Miss Draper who has made statements to the effect that I as president of the Women's Athletic Association have taken it upon myself to encourage among the members of the M.W.S.A.A. Council, sentiments not in accord with her proposal. At no time was such an irrelevant matter discussed at our council meetings nor have I privately expressed my opinion to the members. Our organization is concerned with athletics not with Miss Draper's notions of how an organization should function.

In Miss Draper's last column I see that instead of telling us what the well dressed McGill co-ed should wear, she has devoted her untiring efforts to the activities of the Women's Union. When one is reviewing the year's activities should not the taxi dance for the Combined charities, the Women's Oratorical contest and the plans that were made for the billeting of out-of-town co-eds here for the Winter Carnival be mentioned. Perhaps if Miss Draper would investigate more carefully the work carried on by the Women's Union she would not write "... such activities are very worthwhile but they are after all, few in number, and perhaps do not justify an executive of the present size." Is an executive of ten such an enormous group to look after the interests of all women undergraduates? Is this not a fairer representation of student opinion than a smaller group?

Her proposal is that two women representatives on the S.E.C. would make a public appeal at the beginning of the year for women interested in this committee. I fail to see where this is an improvement over the present system whereby the members are elected. If the appeal should be so successful that you have a deluge of volunteers how then could a committee be set up without the favoritism and cliquishness of which Miss Draper accused the Women's Union of in her letter of January 31. To me this system lends itself more readily to this than a campus wide election.

Is it not better to have smaller organizations which can devote their entire energy to problems pertaining to a specific group with representation on a larger overall executive than an extensive and unwieldy organization such as the S.E.C. could become. If we are going to place the Women's Union under SEC why not the Men's Union as well? Then we could have an immense organization with the centralization of power and leadership in the hands of a few.

Miss Draper is one who has encouraged women to take a greater interest in campus activities, to fill executive positions, yet, and I must admit I fail to understand her reasoning on this point, she proposes to abolish the very group in which women do take an active part and do occupy executive positions. How great a chance has a woman of attaining the presidency of the S.E.C.? Will the leadership given by the Chairman of the Women's Interests Committee of the S.E.C. compare with that exercised by the President of the Women's Union?

Playing Games ?

Dear Sir,
 In the Daily's report of Wednesday's Model Parliament, Mr. J. T. Hackett, Q.C. is quoted as saying in reference to the Model Parliament that it is "an excellent school of discussion, but a game can only be played if the rules (i.e. of parliamentary procedure) are respected."

This may be partly true but what riles me is the implicit reference to political discussions as a 'game'. Perhaps that is what is wrong with the calibre of student politics. The students think of it as a game, something to play around in; not to be taken seriously, of course.

A great man of antiquity once said that politics is the science of man's relationship with man. In observing campus political activities one can easily observe the non-scientific or rather non-humanitarian outlook of the vast majority of McGill students.

Less than 3% (200) of the campus body is politically-minded. In a world in which each student's future is governed by the decisions of the politicians, we don't seem to care. Why are we so disinterested in our own vital interests? This problem requires consideration by more thoughtful students, of which there are more than 3%, I hope.

International Student Service Seminar

Where Civilizations Meet

By Chuck Taylor

This is an attempt—long overdue—to tell McGill students about last summer's Fourth International Student Service Seminar at Limbour, Que. I should perhaps apologize for having delayed this issue in doing what was plainly the duty of a delegate, but, as an excuse, let me say that at no time in the year is this matter of the Seminar more topical than right now when applications are being called for a fifth gathering, this time in the most interesting site of all southern India.

Rare Opportunity
 A Seminar represents a rare opportunity for students of many nations, and many civilizations to meet and discuss problems of mutual interest and often of great urgency. It represents five weeks of intensive and fascinating education in the attitudes and ideals of other peoples. It represents an enjoyable period within close contact with one of the most congenial groups one can ever hope to meet.

Unique Phenomenon
 But a Seminar is at least two things more. It is a unique period in the life of an individual, and it is an almost unique phenomenon in the modern world. Few students have ever had the good fortune to take part, even for a short time, in a truly corporate life. A university like McGill certainly cannot afford such an opportunity. It's very size makes this impossible. Group spirit seems to be able to exist only in the hysteria of a football rally.

Corporate Life
 But the corporate life of the Seminar is one of its most striking attributes. It is that part of the Seminar that one cannot forget, even if all the facts and figures and even ideas that one learnt have been swallowed by the abyss of the student sub-conscious. Eighty to one hundred students gather from all parts of the world with a common purpose, and a common belief that they can learn much from each other. They live together in close contact for a number of weeks, and out of this develops a little world, sufficient in itself, and divorced from the currents of the larger world around. It is a small, self-governing community prepared to make its own history and raise its own ideals.

Diverse Backgrounds Meet
 It is because of this that students from entirely diverse backgrounds can meet and establish a rapport and a friendship that would be impossible anywhere else, nad that is never quite recaptured once the Seminar is over. If there is any such thing in human beings as an innate sense of the bond of their common humanity, it is in a Seminar such as this that one comes closest to realizing it. From Limbour last summer, I can remember a striking example that can testify to this fact. One of the delegates who arrived late at the Seminar was a European girl who had been through a great deal during the war and since. What she had seen had quite convinced her that there was no love lost between peoples. She arrived ready to encounter a polite sense of hostility, and a contact with others restricted to formal discussion. She was genuinely amazed at what she saw. Within a few days she had entered fully into the corporate life of the Seminar. Her faith in international friendship was revived—I should say, recreated—by this experience. The Seminar was without doubt a unique experience in her life.

Creates Its Own History
 But it is virtually a unique phenomenon in the world as well. In this small, temporary world, the antipathic and Lollistatus that exist in its larger counterpart disappear almost entirely. It is prepared, as I said, to create its own history, not to be mired in the conditions created by another. Here one can achieve an objectivity that one cannot find elsewhere in the active life of society anywhere in the globe. At my Seminar there were delegates from both France and Germany. There was no strain in their relations. They could talk of mutual problems without hostility. One of the French delegates once said, "In Europe, this would be impossible; people remember too well the past." In the Seminar, this aspect of the past could be forgotten, it only for a while and in this lies one of its greatest contributions to our modern student life.

Mutual Harmony and Understanding

By Marion van der Walde

What happens when eighty-five students from three different continents are brought together to live with one another for four weeks? Can true international understanding and friendship between people of different races, religions, and cultures be achieved?

If the International Student Service Summer Seminar held in Canada last year is any indication, the answer to that question is a most emphatic 'yes.'

At the Seminar, delegates from twelve different countries in North America, Europe and Asia, got together for an intensive program of lectures, discussions, and getting to know one another.

Personal Contact
 The lectures and discussions were, of course, very important and beneficial. But the factor which did more than anything else to make the seminar a success was the personal contact, the daily living together of people who normally terse number of subjects, including social conditions in Southeast Asia, the various aspects of the Colombo plan, and the control of atomic energy. The lecturers were public figures invited to be guest speakers, and members of the resident staff.

The system used was such that everyone gathered to hear the speaker, and then adjourned in small groups to discuss what had been said. Each conference group had a leader, who guided the discussion so that everyone had an opportunity to offer an opinion or to raise questions. The plenary session was then resumed, with one person from each group giving an outline of what had been discussed in his or her conference. The most challenging problems were then taken up by the entire group, and questions were directed at the speaker.

 This procedure was repeated after lunch, at the afternoon session. In the evenings, there was always some program, either academic, such as panels, speakers, sometimes recreational, and sometimes a combination, such as a Mock Security Council.
Trips and Tours
 Thursday was 'trip day.' Every week, tours were organized which took the group to such places as government buildings, the National Gallery in Ottawa, pulp and paper mills and numerous others. Due to the varied interests of the members, an effort was made to provide visits to as many diverse centers as possible. On these trips, the group travelled by special bus, and the favorite pastime while driving (Continued on Page 6)

ISS Scholarships

Two articles on this page today tell of last summer's International Student Service (ISS) seminar in Canada, and thus preview the fifth ISS seminar which this year is to be held in India.

Three McGill students will win scholarships to enable them to join a company of 40 Canadian students at the seminar, which will be held from May 28 to July 2. The scholarships will cover room, board, and tuition for the five-week program, and travel expenses to and from India. Any McGill undergraduate or graduate student is eligible to apply for a scholarship, and application forms are available at the student council office in the Union. Applications close March 14. Selections will be made by a joint student-faculty committee on the basis of leadership qualities and academic records.

The site of the conference was very advantageous in that it was isolated enough to prevent too many distractions, and near enough to Ottawa to be convenient for trips and tours. The Seminar members lived in a classical college in Limbour, Quebec, right on the Gatineau river. The college itself contained all the facilities necessary to run the seminar.

Day's Program
 The day's program began with breakfast at eight, followed by the morning lecture. The theme of the seminar was "Contributions and Needs of East and West," and the lectures themselves covered an ex-

WORKING WITH CANADIANS IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE SINCE 1817

The Daily Meets;

Dr. Williams: Mathematician

By H. Don Allen

"Most people think of mathematics as something like book-keeping; as a subject that is down to earth . . . They don't think of the architect as a bricklayer."

Those are the words of mathematician; a man who describes mathematics as "a language; a very accurate and succinct method of saying a great many things."

Professor W. L. G. Williams has been with McGill's Department of Mathematics for twenty-eight years. His kindly manner and sincere love of his subject have enabled him, through the years, to introduce hundreds of advanced fields in the "beautiful poetic subject" that has been his life's work. "Mathematics is something of a humanistic subject. It gives you something higher than the ordinary life from day to day, important as that may be."

Dr. Williams did undergraduate work at Haverford College, Philadelphia, concentrating his studies on modern languages. He honored in mathematics at Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship; received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1920. His field of study was higher arithmetic: theory of numbers.

He claims that he stressed mathematics in his course of study because "I was less stupid in that than anything else"; teaches it because "I don't know anything else; and not much of that, I'm afraid." Nevertheless he is a Fellow of the Royal Society, treasurer of the Canadian Mathematical Congress (which he was instrumental in organizing), and, since 1934, has been full professor in the Department. He has represented the University at international gatherings of mathematicians.

In Dr. Williams' Engineering Building office mathematical texts in many languages are stacked amid geometrical models and old exam books on a crowded desk. He will pick up a Norwegian text as casually as one written in English. "A fortiori," "il faut aux yeux"; foreign terms and phrases, all a part of the international language of mathematics, sparkle through his lectures to first — and second-year (Continued on Page 6)

Student Society President

Platform

It is my belief that student government has, in the past year, been run to the general satisfaction of the majority. I do not propose, therefore, a large number of detailed changes, but rather a shift in emphasis on three main points:

1. Co-ordinated Financial Aid:

While definitely favouring the present policy of underwriting student activities such as Clubs, Dances, and the Red and White Revue, I feel that this should be more efficiently co-ordinated. During my tenure of office as Commerce representative on the S.E.C., and as Chairman of the Finance Department of that organization, I have noted unnecessary disbursements of student funds, because of the assumption that "The S.E.C. will cover the losses." This most unrealistic attitude has two harmful effects:

(1) It reduces the surplus needed for capital repairs over the summer months to Student's Society equipment, such as the Union;

(2) It encourages an attitude with respect to finances which would not be tolerated in future life.

This can only be overcome by a more systematic and efficient policy. I favour co-ordinated aid, but not a give-away program.

2 Student Athletic Autonomy:

McGill has, in the past, been respected for her non-professional attitude toward sports. During the same period it has been our proud boast that the students played a more active role in the organization of athletics, than in almost any North American University. It is my experience that the above facts are not unrelated. I therefore regret an appreciable trend toward faculty control and professionalism in recent years.

The reorganized S.A.C. has done an excellent job over the past year, but there are still flaws in our sports hierarchy. Students must have greater representation at all levels of the athletic organization and particularly on the important Athletic Board, the membership of which presently consists of 3 students, 3 graduates and 3 faculty representatives. Due to the students' limited tenure of office, a considerable shift toward graduate and faculty control has gone largely unnoticed.

I will make it my duty to curb this trend and will work toward greater autonomy for the athletic representatives of the students. Encouragement of minor sports is intrinsically bound up with the above attitude.

3. Inter-University Relations:

I make no pretense of extensive knowledge concerning N.F.C.U.S. and I.S.S. I have nevertheless become familiar with certain of the larger issues involved.

There has been considerable discussion recently concerning a separate I.S.S. fund-raising campaign on the campus. McGill's contribution to this organization has been unfavourably compared to smaller universities.

Personally, I resent percentage point discussions of charitable contributions. The Combined Charities Fund was set up in order to co-ordinate financial appeals. I see no reason why I.S.S. or any other group should envisage a break with the combined charities and confront students with further requests for money. The times when every organization made its own appeal have been happily forgotten, and I do not favor this return.

N.F.C.U.S. and I.S.S. play an important part in our relations with other universities, and I therefore propose that an advisory committee which could be convened at the request of the above organizations be set up to advise them on Student Society policy. The membership on such a committee could be worked out between the S.E.C., N.F.C.U.S. and I.S.S. on a basis of negotiation.

I will make it my purpose to support I.S.S. and N.F.C.U.S. within reason. I do not believe that student interests and those of N.F.C.U.S. and I.S.S. are necessarily synonymous.

Much S.E.C. activity consists of everyday administrative and executive work, the scope of which

Bill Magyar

Platform

If elected President of the Students Society, I shall advocate a policy of active co-ordination and continuous improvement of student administration. I do not propose any major changes in the constitution or the form of government, but I will uphold the following:

(1) To give eminence to the Undergraduate Societies' Presidents Committee in setting policies and in carrying them out as they represent the entire student body. Consequently the Undergraduate Societies should have complete control of their finances, being responsible for budgeting to the Undergraduate Societies President's Committee.

(2) To maintain, and not to accelerate the accumulation of a surplus. I do not intend to plunge the Society into debt, and cause undue hardships for the future, but I do think that students should receive maximum benefits from the fees that they pay today. Slashing budgets and instituting "no-activities weeks" will not achieve this aim.

(3) To supplement the quorum presently required for Student Society meetings with the referendum as a last resort to decide on motions presented to the Students Society. Its practice was started last year and should be carried on to ensure a progressive student government.

(4) To strive for more active student participation in all activities sponsored by the Society and yet maintain the high scholastic standing that is called for.

(5) To support the numerous clubs and societies on the campus to the utmost, financially and morally, and to encourage their aid in inviting well-known personalities to speak to these various groups.

(6) To work for the establishment of a new Union.

These are some of the items of deep interest which I shall always keep in mind. Besides these, I pledge myself to carry out all the duties and assignments required of the President of the Students Society to the best of my ability, and to serve for the better interests of the student body on the Students Executive Council and the Students Athletics Council.

William B. Magyar.

Pen Sketch

In nominating Bill Magyar to the position of President of the Students Society, we firmly believe that he has the necessary qualifications of leadership and experience required for this important post.

Bill is presently in his fourth year of mining engineering. His first two years were spent at Dawson where he proved his ability in a number of varied extracurricular activities. He was news editor of the Dawson Weekly at a time when this paper was a prime example of Dawson's famous unity and spirit. At the same time he was secretary-treasurer of the Dawson Engineering Undergraduate Society. Bill also showed a keen interest in intramural athletics, managing the renowned floor-hockey league while also being an active participant.

Upon entering McGill proper in the fall of 1950, Bill was honoured by being elected to the Scarlet Key Society; he was also made a member of Phi Epsilon Alpha, the honorary engineering society.

Last year he was chairman of the Students Intramural and Recreational Council and was thereby a member of the Students' Athletics Council. His organizational abilities were brought to light again in the reorganization of the S.A.C. for which he was partly responsible, and for cementing S.E.C. relationships.

This year, while not occupying any major campus post, Bill has been actively engaged on the committees of the Winter Carnival, Plumbers' Ball, and the Mining and Metallurgical Society of which he

Mel Rothman

Platform

In outlining my program I wish to make quite clear my determination to see each of the following points realized:

Executive Administration

1. A clearly non-political approach to student affairs.

2. Thorough and deliberate supervision of Students' Society finances.

3. Encouragement of stronger, more active undergraduate societies through necessary financial backing and competitive programming.

4. Establishment of an External Affairs Committee to co-ordinate all relations between the McGill Students' Society and students elsewhere in Canada and throughout the world. This committee would give the Society one strong voice where problems of external policy arise, e.g. the Canadian-Soviet exchange question.

5. Thorough and exhaustive report to the student body on the possibility of a new Union.

6. Urge the abolition of the "No Activities Week" and a return to five issues of The Daily a week. If these two experiments have not appreciably affected academic standings.

7. Propose to the undergraduate societies that they set up second-hand book exchanges within each faculty, and insist that the prices of new books at the Book Store be kept at the lowest possible level.

8. Reorganization of the Advertising Board enabling greater financial income through individual initiative to the Annual, Choral Society, Red and White Revue, and Players Club.

Educational and Entertainment

1. SCOPE—full support for this committee set up by the SEC this year to promote activities of a cultural and entertaining nature. SCOPE ought to be able to give extensive financial backing to clubs and organizations which wish to invite speakers or entertainers who would be of broad interest on the campus. A comprehensive program of speakers in almost every field ranging from Canadian Literature through Sports to Atomic Fission ought to be maintained here as it is at the better American and British Universities.

2. Investigation into an Arts and Science course in public speaking. Every student shall some day have to speak before a group of one kind or another, yet no formal training is available in public speaking here as it is at most other Universities.

3. Encouragement of a mature campus humour magazine along the lines of the Harvard Lampoon.

Athletic and Recreational:

1. Full support to intramural and recreational athletic program.

2. Guarantee that money students pay towards the athletic program will ensure them a strong voice in the formation of all athletic policy.

3. Press for at least one more outdoor hockey rink to encourage intramural, inter-fraternity and faculty hockey teams, therefore broadening student athletic participation.

4. Emphasis on the Winter Carnival, Athletics Nights and other such activities which have wide student participation and serve to promote college spirit.

Mel Rothman

Pen Sketch

We, the undersigned, are firmly convinced that Mel Rothman is the outstanding choice for the Presidency of the Students' Society. If one had to choose the four chief qualities the job requires, they would be maturity, balance, tact and experience. Mel Rothman has clearly demonstrated that he has all four.

Now a first year law student, Mel was graduated from McGill last spring after an impressive career in undergraduate life:

Union President

Danny Kingstone

Platform

The president of the McGill Union has a two fold function.

1. His primary one is to master and administer the problems and details necessary to the running of such an institution.

2. The second one is to increase the facilities, create new activities and promote new ideas.

Unfamiliarity with the administrative problems leaves one little time to carry out the second function which is equally important.

Having been on the Union House committee, I feel that, as well as attending to the administrative details, I could devote more time to broader policy.

General Policy

The Union should become more of a center of students' interests and activities, and therefore I would like to see the following instituted.

Activities

1. In co-operation with the executives of the various faculties, there could be more gen nights, professors' teas, etc.

2. Bring down more speakers to discuss topics of interest to all whether they be of a political, cultural, or scientific nature.

3. Have more informal dances at the Union so that students can spend an enjoyable and relatively inexpensive weekend.

4. Encourage students to exhibit their art and other handicrafts in the Union.

REPAIRS AND RENOVATIONS

1. Improve the appearance of the main lobby by installing indirect lighting and repainting the walls.

2. Install air conditioning in the ballroom, cafeteria, and the lounge.

3. Sandblast the front of the building to present a more beautiful exterior.

4. Purchase more folding chairs for the ballroom so that clubs and societies would not have to rent them.

Since the present Union has outgrown its facilities due to increased enrollment, I would attempt to secure support for a new building.

Till then, I will do my best to see that the present Union facilities are put to their best use.

Danny Kingstone

Pen Sketch

Those of us who have worked with Danny and have known him these past few years, endorse him as our candidate for the Union presidency, without any doubt or hesitancy.

We believe that the job of Union president should go to a man who is familiar with its administrative problems, is able to estimate a sound and satisfactory policy, and is capable of undertaking the responsibilities that go with the position. And therefore, because of his past experience and accomplishments, we feel that Dan is the man for the job.

Danny is an honours student in Political Science. In the last year he has been at McGill he has:

1. Won the Bovey Shield for public speaking.
2. Debating executive.
3. Winter Carnival executive.
4. Combined Charities executive.
5. Chairman of PEP Rally committee.
6. Intramural football and basketball.
7. Chairman of the Dates Committee.
8. Secretary of McGill Union.
9. Signing officer of the McGill Union.
10. Vice-President of the McGill Union.

He has performed all these jobs well, and we are sure if Dan is elected he will continue ably to represent and carry out the wishes of McGill Students.

Platform

During the past few years in my connection with student activities including one year of living in the Union as Managing Editor of the Daily I have felt that the Union is scarcely a part of campus life. Actually less than ten per cent of McGill students make regular use of the building.

The fact is that during the past years the Union has become nothing more than a building. It will be my aim if elected President of the Union to make it a service to the students rather than the mere convenience it now is.

In attaining this aim I intend to bring to bear the following policy:

(a) To set up under the Union House Committee a well-organized Campus Data Bureau;

(b) To conduct dances in the Union when possible to which it will be socially acceptable to come;

(c) To maintain a higher standard of cleanliness throughout the building;

(d) To conduct future renovations with an eye to making the Union a more attractive place for students;

(e) To purchase a stock of folding chairs for use by campus clubs and societies particularly in the Ballroom;

(f) To investigate the possibility of appropriate murals or pictures on the various bare expanses of walls;

(g) To continue what has come to be known as the Union five year plan including particularly (a) Completion of renovations in the basement particularly those rooms used by campus clubs, (b) Renovation of the main lobby, (c) Cleaning of the building exterior.

The problem of a new Union should also be constructively revived. I propose to do this by a realistic reappraisal of the problem.

A. After collecting all relevant data on the present building to formulate a report on the necessity of a new Union, discovering if possible, when this necessity will arise.

B. To devise a plan whereby funds for a New Union will be ready when the necessity arises.

C. If no action appears necessary within the near future to draw up a studied repair and renovation plan for the Union Building and furnishings, along the lines of sensible modernization.

It is my belief that a basic change in Union policies is absolutely essential to perpetuate, and even maintain the McGill Union; however, I also feel that more than flashy ideas is needed, the basic plank of my platform is nothing more than good old-fashioned hard work.

Jim Robb.

Pen Sketch

Jim Robb is at present a First Year Law student and president of his year. He has taken a very active part in student activities on the campus this year including the Law Undergraduate Society, and particularly the recent Law issue of the McGill Daily, also is Assistant Editor of the McGill Law Journal, and was Business Manager of FORGE.

While working for his Arts degree Jim was a member of the executive of the McGill Daily, last year as Managing Editor, and the year before as Assistant Sports Editor. As Managing Editor last year he lived in the McGill Union and thus had contact with every type of student function, particularly with the workings of the Union. This coupled with a broad knowledge of student activities in every phase which he gained as a member of the Daily Managing Board has given him an insight and background which will prove invaluable as President of the McGill Union.

Throughout his college career Jim has been active in every type of extracurricular activity. He participates actively in Intramural Sports, and served for one year on

Womens Union President

Ann Skaitth

Platform

First of all, I should like to thank all those who have nominated me for President of the Women's Union.

I shall make every effort to allot a percentage of the funds of the Women's Union towards the purchase of books pertaining to the most important Arts, Science and Commerce courses. These books would be kept in the R.V.C. library.

To the utmost of my ability I shall support the women of McGill both in the routine work of the Women's Union and in any special problems that arise during the year. I would like to carry on a number of activities started this year, namely the Cancer Clinic and free concert tickets for the non-resident students.

Since the number of women students at McGill is increasing steadily each year, I feel that a special effort should be made to create greater unity between the non-resident and resident women students at the university. Open houses at R.V.C. on special occasions should certainly be continued and should be publicized well in advance.

At all times I shall give my utmost co-operation to the President of the M.W.S.A.A. and shall take a definite interest in all athletic activities. I should like to see more women taking part in sports at McGill, and it is my intention to foster women's representation on the Athletics Night and Winter Carnival Committees.

As a member of the S.E.C. I shall try to co-ordinate the interest and activities of the women of McGill with those of the general student body, and shall make it my prime concern to keep the Council aware of the needs of McGill women.

Ann Skaitth.

Pen Sketch

Ann has already proved her ability as an executive. But there is an even more important fact to be gained from examination of her activities since she came to McGill, and that is that she is interested in every aspect of women's activities on this campus.

She was elected to the Red Wings in her first year, was Vice-President of the M.O.C. Riding Club, and was a member of the Choral Society. In her second year she swam on the Intercollegiate team, was on the Executive of the Winter Carnival, and was elected Member-at-Large to the Women's Union, which she represented this year on the Combined Charities Committee.

In short, she is truly representative of the women students at McGill, and is excellently qualified to act for them in the capacity of President of that Union.

We have every confidence in Ann, not only because of her past record, but because we know from experience that any job she does, she does well. She is able, conscientious, and an efficient and experienced executive.

For these reasons we recommend Ann Skaitth for the position of President of the Women's Union.

Platform

Before stating any of the projects that I would undertake if I were elected President of the Women's Union, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all those who nominated me for the position. The Women's Union plays a very vital role in Student Government at McGill University and I consider it an honour to be nominated for such an important post in it.

During my term of office as Secretary of the Women's Union, it has come to my attention that very few women on the campus are fully aware of the facilities available to them and the activities made possible for them through the Women's Union. Therefore I would like to see much more publicity for this organization in the coming year. This could be carried out by inserting more articles in the Daily, by establishing a Women's Union Information Booth at registration and by extending the handing out of Women's Union Activities Cards to all women students at the time of registration.

Plans have been made to redecorate and improve conditions in the Women's Common Room in the Arts Building, and I would do my best to see that these plans were carried out. I would also like to see certain other facilities such as a stamp machine and a chocolate bar machine put at the women students' disposal in the basement of R.V.C.

Most important of all, I will do my utmost to see that women's rights are acknowledged on the campus, and that the activities of the Women's Union are directed in accordance with the wishes of the majority of the women students at McGill University.

Ruth Taylor

Pen Sketch

A most important qualification for the President of the Women's Union is to have a wide insight into the workings of the administration. Since Ruth has been Secretary of the Women's Union for the past year, and has devoted herself conscientiously to the job, we the undersigned believe that she is well qualified for the position.

Before coming to McGill, Ruth was a member of the Student's Council, President of the French Club and Secretary of the Hi-Y at Westmount High School.

Ruth came to McGill on the Narcissa Farrand Scholarship and since then has maintained a high standard of scholastic achievement, being awarded the McCall Daily Prize for scholarship and promise of contribution to Canadian citizenship.

As a Red Wing, Ruth has taken part in a great variety of campus events, besides being a member of the Choral Society.

Because of her essential qualities as a leader, her friendliness and enthusiasm, as well as her devotion to any job she undertakes, we have no hesitation in endorsing Ruth as worthy of your unqualified support for President of the Women's Union.

2 Acclaimed To Union Posts

Elections this year for major campus posts are highlighted by the nomination of three candidates for Student Society President and two acclamations to the Union House Committee.

Candidates for top student post are Peter Cameron, William B. Magyar, and Mel Rothman. One of these three will become Students Society president of 1952-53 by virtue of a win in the March 5 elections.

On that date other major positions will be contested. Though John Jonas and Sam Harding have been acclaimed to the vice-presidency and the secretariat of the Union respectively, elections will be held for the presidency. Voters will choose between Danny Kingstone of Arts and Jim Robb of Law.

Two third year Artswomen, Ann Skaitth and Ruth Taylor will contest the Women's Union Presidency. A three-way combat will mark the secretariat elections, the candidates being Carole Beaudoin, Mary Isabel McCall, and Judy Patton.

Mike Brodeur and Ian Rutherford have been nominated for Chairman of the Students Athletics Council. Ann McLeish and Jean Machan have been nominated for President of the Women Students' Athletic Association.

The top Debating Union Society post has been filled by acclamation. The new president is Eric de Beljaigue a third year Arts student. Patricia Vos has also been elected by acclamation to the position of Women's Vice-President.

Elected to the Debating Society yesterday's open meeting were Jack Shayne — men's vice-president, Dave L'Esperance — Corresponding secretary, Peter Slater — Recording Secretary, and Jerome Smythe — Junior Treasurer.

UBC Challenges Texas College In Blood Drive

Vancouver — (CUP) — The title of "The most red-blooded University on the North American continent" has captured the spirit of several Universities.

The blood feud started originally when Texas decided to beat Idaho, who was sitting on its laurels with a new record. Now Texas has the largest record for collecting the largest quantity of blood on any American campus with 2,810 pints. The University of British Columbia is out to better the record in their blood drive by collecting at least 2,810 pints. It was scheduled to run from February 11-15.

Students, who had no time to wait in the lineup were able to make appointments to be kept within five days.

A faculty award will be given to the group who collects the most according to their quota.

Cornell's Council Rules in Student Housing Situation

(Ithaca exchange) Cornell's Student Council called on the University to make public its policy with regard to discrimination in off campus housing. "Discrimination" has been defined as discrimination against an individual because of his race, religion, or national origin. However, landlords may state preference for foreign students. The policy request consisted of resolutions, including that a landlord who discriminates shall not have his house placed on the approved list, that houses not be listed on the list of available housing unless the landlords state they they do not discriminate, that the university make public its policy on all listed houses and that the student council would like to cooperate in the implementation of these proposals.

The resolutions were approved by majority vote.

Platform

First of all, I would like to thank all those who nominated me to the position of Secretary of the Women's Union.

Many women students at McGill University are not fully aware of all the advantages offered them by the Women's Union. For instance the promotion of the cultural interests provided by the Women's Union through the Theatre for Non-Residents has proved popular to the small group of women students who have taken advantage of this opportunity. Through the means of extensive publicity, I would like to see the participation of a larger number of women encouraged.

I believe that the project of refurbishing the common room in the Arts Building in order that more of the women will make use of it, is a good one and I would like to see this continued next year.

During the past few months as Member-at-Large for second year non-resident students, I have acquired some knowledge of the procedure and policy of the executive, and have become acquainted with the duties expected from the secretary of this organization. I feel that I am capable of taking on the responsibility of this position, and, if elected, will devote the time and interest due such an office, keeping in mind at all times that it is for

I would like to thank those who have nominated me for the position of Secretary of the Women's Union. If I am elected to this position I will give my utmost co-operation to the executive in furthering their policies.

I feel I would be able to devote the time necessary to adequately perform the functions of secretary.

It would be my constant aim to work toward furthering the interests and activities of McGill Women.

The women students at McGill need good leadership, and the Women's Union Executive needs a capable secretary. Judy Patton is our choice of that leader. She is ideally suited to the position of Secretary of the Women's Union Executive in every way. She has the enthusiasm to uphold the work of the Women's Union, and she has the executive ability necessary to further its aims to the best interests of the women students.

As a second year student in the Faculty of Arts, Judy has already proven her interest in student affairs. While at school, she undertook the difficult management of the Red Cross organization and followed a varied program was president in her final year. She has

Since the Chairman of the Student Athletic Council is primarily concerned with athletic policy and administration, I will limit my platform to this side of student activities.

- 1) I will represent the student interests in all matters of athletic policy and administration.
- 2) Investigate the possibilities of a more suitable athletic award system.
- 3) I will attempt to maintain the existing athletic system which was fully reorganized last year.
- 4) Insist on better seating facilities for the students at football games.
- 5) Insist on more adequate rink facilities for intra-mural and inter-fraternity hockey leagues.

If elected, I will do the utmost to fulfill the duties and responsibilities of my position.

We, the undersigned strongly feel that Mike Brodeur, is the best choice for President of the S.A.C. due to his experience, interest and ability.

Mike has been interested in athletics ever since he came to McGill. He has played on the McGill Squash Team for three years, winning the Dominion Junior Squash Championship.

If I am elected to the office of chairman of the Student's Athletics Council I will devote as much time and effort as possible to bring about the following changes, recommendations and improvements.

- (1) To see that the Students lose none of the power and responsibilities which they now have in the smooth operation of athletics for which the University is well noted.
- (2) To urge the proper authorities to see what can possibly be done to speed the construction of the rink auditorium, which I am informed has been partially paid for by contributions from the Graduates' Society.
- (3) To see that the skating rink, on the lower campus, which so many enjoyed, is replaced next year and in the years following.
- (4) To see that a suitable training table is put in force so that members of teams which practice during dinner hours are assured of a good meal which they are not obliged to pay for out of their own pockets.
- (5) To see that pre-game rallies are brought up to the standards prevalent before this last year.
- (6) To see the Band and the cheerleaders are present at other spectator sports and not merely at football games.
- (7) To see a definite policy on

Platform

Before presenting my platform, I would like to express my appreciation to those who nominated me for this position.

There are three main points to the platform which I am presenting to you, and which I feel would be beneficial to the women students of McGill.

Firstly, I would like to see an increased participation in the Intramural and Recreational sports which are provided by the M.W.S.A.A. This can be accomplished by a more concentrated effort to bring the benefits of these activities as well as their recreational and social values to the attention of the women students.

Secondly, an increased participation by women in our now famous Athletics Nights.

Thirdly, I would like to see a continuation of the Extramural Meet with Macdonald College which is being held for the first time this year. It provides an opportunity for our intramural champions to compete with those of Macdonald College and a chance to get better acquainted with our 'cousins.'

In conclusion, if elected, I shall do my best to uphold the interests of the students on the Women's Athletic Board as well as putting into effect the points which I have listed above.

We feel that Ann MacLeish would make a capable, efficient president of the M.W.S.A.A.

As a 3rd year science student, she is very interested in Women's Sports at McGill. She has worked hard as the manager of the Archery Club and as such is a member of the Women's Athletic Council. Ann has also represented McGill on Intercollegiate Archery and Rifle teams.

Her friendly personality, quiet humour and leadership ability would be valuable assets for an active year of sports on the campus.

COMMERCE MEN: This is what I am aiming at: More ENTHUSIASM, SPIRIT, and UNITY in the School of Commerce. Here are some of the concrete proposals by which I expect to accomplish this.

1. LUNCHEONS with Guest Speakers.
2. An annual FORMAL budgeted to suit every pocket.
3. SMOKERS with appropriate entertainment.
4. TOURS — scheduled to accommodate more students.
5. COMMERCE NEWS — a column in the Daily once a week.
6. OPEN MEETINGS of executive and students.
7. ATHLETES — an integrated program.

Apart from these extra-curricular proposals, I would try to implement a system of mimeographed NOTES approved by professors and comparable to that of the Engineering Faculty.

If elected, I would effect a closer working relationship between the students and the executive, and encourage all suggestions and proposals.

Fellow students: If elected as President of the C.U.S. I plan to carry out the following well-balanced programme of activities for the benefit of the Commerce Undergraduate Society.

1. The number of tours will be increased so that every Commerce man will have the opportunity of seeing in operation the key industries of the Montreal Region. These will include trips to banks and investment houses as well as to the manufacturing industries, thus making more interesting every phase of your education at McGill.
2. The instituting of a series of informal "supper meetings" at which business men, including Commerce Alumni, will discuss topics of current business interest with you. These will help you decide which field of business you wish to enter when you graduate. Included is the setting up of a permanent Alumni Relations Department of the C.U.S.
3. For the past few years there has been talk of installing a coffee machine in Purvis Hall. Next October, if permitted by the authorities, there will be one there. Also, with the assistance of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, I plan to add cigarette, Coke and milk vending machines to the Arts Building, such as are now installed in the Engineering Building.
4. There is an increasing interest every year in our participation in inter-faculty sports. I intend to see that this trend continues by acquiring more equipment and arranging with the Athletics Department

Med Freshmen, Chapeaus Win Mural Titles

Boxers Defend Tom Gibson Memorial Cup

The McGill boxing team entrained this morning for Kingston to compete for the Gibson trophy, symbol of intercollegiate boxing supremacy against Queens, OAC, and Toronto. The semi-finals will be held tonight and the finals will trade punches on Saturday night, each attempting to annex the crown of his respective division.

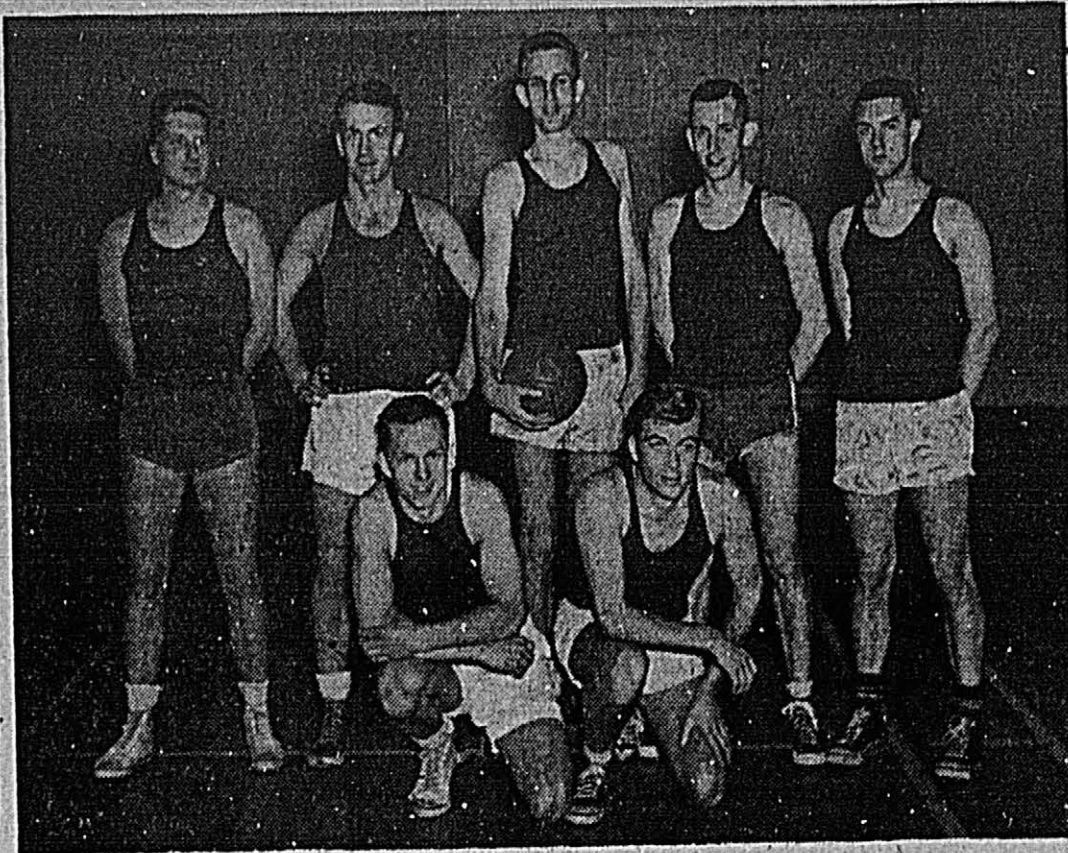

Five of last year's intercollegiate champions will be competing in the Kingston encounters. Jim Miller of McGill, Thompson of Queens, Doane of O.A.C., Greenley of Toronto, and Sweet of Queens. All of the crown wearers will be defending the same titles they won last year, except Sweet, who vacates his 130 throne to take a shot at 135 title.

The pairing in the semi-finals are as follows: in the 130 class—MacLeod (M) vs. Betz (T); Tate (Q) vs. Wright (OAC); in the 135 class—Thomas (M) vs. Sweet (Q); Reilly (T) vs. Brackon (OAC); in the 140 class—Beel (M) vs. Derrick (Q); Wright (T) vs. Baker (OAC); in the 147 class—Keller (M) vs. Doane (OAC); Couceiro (T) vs. Embury (Q); in the 155 class—Wood (M) vs. Oliver (OAC); Pelcott (T) vs. Thompson (Q); in the 165 class—Green (T) vs. Fletcher (Q); Gareau (M) vs. Jenkins (T); Mills (Q) vs. Herlihy (OAC); in the heavyweight class—Miller (M) vs. Ellis (T) or Pallardi (T), Hardman (Q) vs. Smith (OAC).

Many of the final and semi-final bouts will either be rematches of last year's finals or of bouts held earlier this season. One of the best matches of last year's intercollegiate championships was in the heavyweight division in which Jim Miller of the Indians defeated R. A. Smith of O.A.C. and it is quite likely that this year's heavyweight final will see a rematch between the two. Earlier this year, McGill students witnessed a bout between Anomas or McGill and Sweet of Queens in which Thomas gained a close decision, the same two met in one of the 135 class semi-finals and the winner will be an onus-on favorite to go on to win the title.

Coach Bert Light believes his squad, led by Miller and Jenkins, has an excellent chance to win the team title, an honor they were forced to share last year with Queens. Coach Light was forced to make a last minute change in his team selections when Hy Rodman suffered a broken nose in a practice bout.

Intramural Champion Med Freshmen Basketball Squad

Redmen at London, Toronto For Weekend Doubleheader

McGill's senior basketball team left for London and Toronto last night with a contingent of ten men and a coach, and a coach's car.

Whether they return in the same condition is strictly a matter of conjecture at this point.

The reason for this can be easily understood after a glance at the Redmen's points of call on the weekend itinerary.

This jaunt, known affectionately in local circles as the 'Suicide Weekend' brings the cagers to two cities that have been the graveyards of more McGill basketball teams than anyone cares to count.

Whether this newest edition under coach Joe Anderson suffers the same fate remains to be seen.

First stop is at Thames Hall tonight and a return meeting with the Western Mustangs. The Melarmen, undefeated in date, whipped the Redmen 64-38 in Montreal two weeks ago.

Moving over to the Queen City the following day, the local forces do battle with the Toronto Blues in the postage stamp size Hart House court. The Blues possess a victory over the Andersonmen this season as well. This came at the Currie Gym on January 25 by a 71-54 score.

As far as the Mustang game is concerned the Redmen appear to be in a better position than they were at the time of the first meeting. Since that latter encounter the Red crew has added Sol Tolchinsky to the roster. He has already proved his value to the club though he has participated in but two games.

Whether the big bucketman is large enough a factor to make the difference is extremely problematical.

The Blues, on the other hand, have not been standing pat with their lineup since the last McGill game. Since then coach Bob Master-son has complemented his powerful crew with 6'4" Art Blinnington to give the squad added rebound and scoring strength (as if he needed it).

The Redmen's lineup is set with Merling, Tissenbaum, Findlay, Cunningham and Klein. Reserves are Tolchinsky, Garbus, Wipper, Russell and Diamond.

The completion of these games will leave the Redmen with but one remaining intercollegiate contest. That will be played the following week-end in Hamilton against McMaster.

Inters Prepare — Foes Beware

Indians Face Two Braves, Warriors In Double Go

'Practice makes perfect,' the saying goes. Realizing that while they may never attain perfection, the Indians had better improve their general calibre of play, Smiley Wilson, coach of McGill's inter basketball squad yesterday put his charges through a heavy workout at the gym.

The Indians, losers to Carleton College and University of Montreal in their last two tilts, face a heavy schedule of two games in two nights this weekend. On Friday, Wilson's gang tangles with the Cadets of RMC, while on Saturday, the inters are slated to take to the court against the Carabins of Ottawa University.

The squad now has a record of three wins and three defeats in the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Conference. The Indians have gained the nod over Macdonald, Bishops and Loyola while suffering defeats at the hands of the aforementioned powerhouses, Montreal and Carleton, as well as Sir George Williams College.

In facing the Cadets, McGill is tackling a high-powered outfit that only lost to Georgians by a margin of three points. Since the latter downed the Wilson gang by 18, tomorrow night's game shapes up as quite a contest.

Although the above figures might give the impression that the home crew is in for quite a drubbing, Coach Wilson is of the opinion that his boys can come out on top in both games.

The addition of Alex Sulyok has made a lot of difference on the squad, Wilson says. Sulyok is a top notch performer and he certainly injected quite a spark into the team last game. The inters gave the vaunted U. of M. squad quite a battle before succumbing to Bonvouloir and Co. If Alex, who doubles as a halfback on the grid team, can match his 15 point performance of Tuesday night, the Indians should have a lot to say about the weekend tilts.

Another cheery note has been struck by the great form displayed by Don Walsh. The big boy has really been hustling in the last few games and when he's right, he can go up with the best of them on the backboards.

Jules Blond, the set-shot wizard has also apparently returned to top form. He came up with a 14 point effort against the Carabins and now possesses a respectable nine point per game average.

Earl Merling, the stirring pivot who turned an ankle last week in an uncertain starter tonight, Earl missed the Montreal game but if his ankle feels up to par he will don the colours this weekend.

The rest of the tribe, Ben Laidlaw, Roy Amaron, Eddy Tarasofsky, Ted Rice, Marty Reszeinick, Irving Wolf, Rolly Gallay, Gerry Tuttle and Bob Hanna, are all set and willing to give the visitors a hot reception.

Ashton To Try Again

The postponed Intermediate Intercollegiate Swimming championships, will definitely be swung this Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the New Memorial Pool.

The Ottawa-St. Lawrence Valley Conference meet will feature teams from Laval, Queen's, R.M.C., Carleton, Loyola and McGill. Featured swimmers will be Lucien Beaumont, who holds the Pool record for the 100 yards freestyle. His main competition will be from Humphreys of Queens.

Charlie Meeks, Caldwell and Adrian Deslauriers will be swimming for the Mermen, in a preview of some of next year's Senior swimming team. Laval boasts many strong freestylers besides Beaumont and should field a strong team in the relays.

R.M.C. have been working out in the new Pool at the Military College. This natatorium, built last year is one of the finest in Eastern Canada, and affords the Cadets from Kingston good practice opportunities. Queen's University, until three years ago competed in the Senior Intercollegiate along with Western, McGill and Carleton.

Carleton College in Ottawa, has always been a powerful contender in both men's and women's swimming. The small school, with a big reputation in the waters, is bound to give the bigger schools lots of trouble.

Not much is known about the Loyola team. However the boys from Sherbrooke St. West, never field an incompetent team, and they could spoil the show for everyone.

Skiers In Action At Carnival

McGill's men's and women's senior ski squads wind up another year of activity this weekend when they travel to Canton New York to compete in the St. Lawrence University Winter Carnival.

The carnival, an annual affair, is one of the largest on the North American continent and annually attracts the cream of the ski crop in Eastern U.S. as well as some crack entries from the west.

Coach Andy Huggessen will be leading his charges in the invasion of the two day meet and though injuries have depleted the ranks, it is confident that his boys will make a fine impression.

The coeds are equally anxious to walk off with the distaff honors and with stars like Doreen Elder who performed sensationally at Dartmouth last weekend, stand a good chance of winning the silverware.

Co-ed Cagers Cop Double

McGill's Junior Basketball team was victorious again, yesterday as they triumphed over Marianopolis and the University of Montreal. They won the game with Marianopolis by a score of 31-12 and the University of Montreal defaulted to the McGill team because of absence.

In the game with Marianopolis, which was played at the Currie Gym, the Juniors proved their ability although it looked, for a time, like they would be defeated.

Floor Pucksters Tie 3-3 But Triumph

In a rough floor-hockey game played last night, which saw the Engineers fight it out for the championship, the Chapeaus drew with the Eggbeaters, but took the two-game total-point series 8-5. Entering the second game with a 5-2 victory, the champs were held to a 3-all tie by the hard-fighting runner-ups.

Faced by John Turner, who turned in a great game along with two goals and Coke, who garnered the other, the Eggbeaters put on a great display but were foiled in their attempts by Bob Keep, who was sensational between the pipes for the Chapeaus. Again and again he kicked out shots that were ticketed for the corners, to keep the score down.

The goal-getters for the winners were Pringle, Garneau and Webb, but many others on both teams had chances to tally, but brilliant defensive work and alert goaling prevented the score from mounting. Although only one penalty was called, the rough play and close-checking caused tempers to flare and almost precipitated a riot. In the third period, a savage check took Turner, who had scored a brace, out of the game with a badly bruised ankle.

The game was even most of the time as each squad scored a couple of goals in the first period. Turner opened the scoring for the Eggbeaters as he beat Keep with a close-in shot. Garneau tied it up passing Read on a screened attempt which gave the janitor no chance. The teams traded goals later in the canto on goals by Pringle for the Chapeaus and Coke for the Eggbeaters.

Both teams went scoreless in the middle frame, and once again the sextets swapped markers. Neither team was able to break the tie, and as the siren sounded to end the game, the Chapeaus were crowned intramural floor-hockey champions of McGill.

The game opened slowly for McGill with Marianopolis leading the scoring all through the first quarter. The second quarter found McGill gaining on the count and preventing their opponents from obtaining any baskets. The score at the half time was 16-9 for McGill Juniors.

The third quarter was the best in the game for the Juniors. They played true to form and potted all of their points for the second half. Janet Bell, Barb Harris and Norma Easr displayed their ability to work as a trio as they successfully worked their team to a 31-9 lead.

McGill was scoreless in the last quarter of the game but with good team work they were able to hold off and intercept the Marianopolis team and limit their scoring to three baskets.

Bell Leads 'Doctors' To Basketball Crown

By MARV GOLDSMITH

The medical convention is over, the older doctors were surprised at the theories propounded by their youthful confederates and finally had to concede that their medicine was far more powerful and effective. And so, at the conclusion of the dramatic meeting, the young men have walked away with the honors for which they were straining all year.

In a thrill-packed contest played at the gym last night, Med. I held off an aroused Med. 4 team to cop the two-game total-point basketball series 50-40. Entering the second game with an 18 point bulge, Med. I settled with a 23-15 defeat in winning the intramural cage championship from the Dawson Engineers, last year champions.

Taking advantage of their opponents' overconfidence, the Reds jumped into an early thirteen point lead, and seemed on their way to a victory. But the younger doctors got over their jitters and kept the Reds from increasing their advantage.

Led by Doug Bell, who topped them with six points, Med. I handled the ball with increasing finesse as the game went along, and ran their wiser confederates into the floor. Checking the Reds' stars, Dave Blair and Dave Caldwell, closely, and throttling any last-quarter attack the Reds could muster, the junior medicine men also passed the ball with precision, and if it hadn't been for bad luck around the basket, might have taken the second game, too.

The opening quarter was marked by the red-hot shooting of Dave Blair, who just couldn't miss when he threw the leather at the basket. However, after scoring four straight baskets, he was checked tenaciously for the rest of the contest, and ended up with eleven points. Also pacing the Reds' attack was Dave Caldwell, who controlled the backboards and continually brought the ball up the floor to set up plays.

For the victors, Doug Bell and John Manhart starred, both offensively and defensively, and completely outdistanced their foes.

The game was extremely well-played and fast, and the referees were in charge of the match throughout. It was cleanly and keenly contested, and the brand of basketball displayed pleased the small crowd in attendance immensely.

The newly-crowned champs who have been fighting all year to gain superiority over their upperclassmen, are made up of Bell, Manhart, Seriver, Brown, Cuddy, Gutelius and Mitchener. The runner-ups include Crawford, Blair, Ballou, Smith, Laurin and Caldwell.
